East Harptree Parochial School.

As in former years the teaching is intelligent and creditable progress is being made in the subjects of instruction. Composition is good and some of the exercises possess considerable merit, and Reading is fluent and fairly expressive. Better enunciation and articulation are desirable.

The order and behaviour are both satisfactory and the children are under nice influence.

There are some interesting features in connection with this school. Cookery is taught by the Head Mistress on the school premises and appears to be a popular subject. No difficulty is experienced in disposing of the desks. Folk Songs, Country and Morris Dances also form a part of the curriculum.

The Pupil Teacher has made a promising start and is likely to be well. Provision for teaching her Geometry and Algebra will be made by the staff. Instead of the Elementary Science prescribed by the Bridgwater Centre she would like to take Botany or Nature Study, and this arrangement would be more suitable for Country Pupil Teachers.
